LOMOND, ALBERTA, FRIDAY, SEPT. 3. 1920

$1.00 PER YEAR.

NOTES

Wheat jumped thirteen cents this week. We can see no reason why it should slump, seriously anyway. Western Canada is finding out that the hot weather in July was a more severe set-back on the yield than was estimated at the time. The shrinkage in the visible supply should hold the prices fairly firm.

o o o

Lomond farmers are perplexed over the apparent undue spread of more than forty cents between Lomond street and Ft. William spot prices. We profess to know nothing about the grain marketing business and since our experience on the land this summer are not sure that we know much about the raising of grain either. Maybe some of the grain men will take up their pen and elucidate the problem to the welfare of the public in general.

The Press will gladly contribute the space to the discussion from every angle.

Outside of a couple of windy days there has been no setback to the threshing around Lomond. With no rain since cutting the sample is golden bright and hard as flint. The most even yield yet recorded is a 250 acre field belonging to Irvin Groff, between Lomond and Travers, which is threshing out better than twenty bushels to the acre.

o o o

Now that it is coming along towards winter the coal miners in England, the United States and in some parts of Canada are threatening to strike. The public is becoming disgusted over the continued strikes of labor factions and are extending very little sympathy toward this latest eruption. We are anxious to see the labor man come into his own but he has begun to take an unfair advantage of a long-suffering general public.

o o o

We are much pleased to see the Lomond stores being filled up with heavy shipments of new goods. There is a sort of a contagious feeling of inspiration when one sees goods being unpacked and sold. The Lomond public requires a raft of outfitting and it is not through any lack of inclination that such is now the case. When we people get the mazuma we like to see in passing around.

o o o

As the old saying goes "ignorance is bliss" but it is also expensive. A few days ago a Lomond man took home a barrel of gas engine oil from the Lomond depot that he had purchased through a catalogue house. He could have bought exactly the same brand at either of the Lomond Hardwares at a saving of 18c per gallon and the freight. Such things as these are very exasperating to a local merchant. They should also exasperate the customer as well. Take as much sentiment out of your dealings as you like but at least be fair. You owe a certain amount of loyalty to your hometown and you should at least know what you are doing when you go into a store to buy. Study the catalogue, but study your local stores as well. Present day merchandising has exploded the theory that the large buyer always can undersell the little fellow.

Two years ago Roy M. Coe and family moved to Albuquerque, N.M., from Fort Scott, Kan., bringing with them the family pet, "Bud" a collie dog. Last November "Bud" disappeared from home and although Mr. Coe advertised and offered a substantial reward, no trace of the dog was found.

Some days ago, however, Mr. Coe received a message from his brother-in-law, an employee of the Fort Scott Gas company, reading: "Bud", somewhat tired, walked into the gas plant and lay down." The dog had apparently taken about eight months making the trip of about 900 miles.

o o o

Mrs. Norah Mulvaney one day met her friend, Mrs. Bridget Carr, who had in her arms her twelfth child.

"Arrah now, Bridget," said Norah "an' there ye are wid another little Carr in yer arms."

"Another it is, Mrs. Mulvaney," replied her friend, "an' its me that's hopin' 'tis the caboose."

Fall and Winter :: 1920-'21

WE ANNOUNCE WITH PRIDE the opening of our fall and winter stocks of Clothing for Men. We have personally examined every article placed in stock, and each line was ordered only after careful comparison of the values offered by the leading manufacturers in each line. With such a system of investigation and comparison, backed by our eighteen years of experience and our affiliation with one of the largest distributors of men's wear in Eastern Canada, we say these values are not the result of chance buying, but of a proven system which guarantees to every customer the most for his money.

Pay us an early visit. If you appreciate real quality you'll enjoy looking these lines over.

We claim EVERY ARTICLE we offer, regardless of price, IS A MONEY SAVER, as as poor stuff was higher, away higher, according to value, than good stuff.

FLANNEL SHIRTS

Men's military flannel shirts----do not confuse these with the scads of stuff being offered and called military flannel. We have seen cotton shirts, and cotton and shoddy shirts, and all kinds of stuff being called military flannel. Ours are big, roomy, well cut shirts and the same old real military flanne. Made in a variety of styles. Prices, $3.25, 3.50, 3.95

MACKINAW COATS

Here is another line we feature, and first, let us explain that the mackinaw is sold by weight and the weights run from 24 to 36 ounces per yard. Now, the slippery gentleman who tells you all about the fine pattern and this and that and the other thing that does not matter, and does not say a word about weights, has got something up his sleeve. Come and look over some of these.

Men's green checked, full belt, double breasted mackinaw, 26 oz. weight, 32 in. long, at - $7.25

Men's plain brown, full belt, double breasted, large collar, half Norfolk style, 28 oz. weight, 33 in. long, being sold at - $10.50

Men's 32 oz. mackinaw--this is getting into the "real" stuff. Comes in seven beautiful patterns, the exceptionally close weave makes it as near wind and water proof as cloth can be made, extra large collar, full cut, double breasted and a dandy fitter, 34 and 35 inches long - $14.50

Plain grey and several shades of plain brown, 34 oz. cloth. There is only one firm in Canada making this weight mackinaw. These coats are full Norfolk, double breasted, large collars, 34 and 35 inches long, price only - $14.75

Men's 36 oz. mackinaw--here is a line extraordinary. The cloth sometimes runs a little over 36 oz. but is only guaranteed to 35 oz., comes in a number of beautiful patterns and has all the features of the better grades. Stores of the Frank Brown class are the only ones offering this line, and only a store operating with our small expense could sell it at the price - $17.50

UNDERWEAR

Our stocks of underwear are not complete, but will be shortly as most of our goods are on the way. We have just passed into stock some real good medium weight lines, and a line of of Penman's heavy all-wool elastic ribbed. This particular garment gives good satisfaction and we will sell it at a little less than formerly, shirts and drawers each - $2.50

Stocks of Stanfield's Kozy-Rib and Watson's will be complete in about ten days.

MITTS AND GLOVES

We handle in our better lines only Clarke's famous Horsehide and Buckskin. All our lined gloves and mitts are guaranteed pure wool lining. If you have not noticed it take our tip—a glove or mitt with a cotton lining is not worth buying. It will get wet in a few minutes and never will get dry, while the wool mitt or wool-lined mitt will not take up the moisture. Wool lining is a feature you should insist upon in all lined gloves and mitts. We do, and pay a little more for it too.

Lined gloves and mitts from - $1.35 UP

WE CANNOT TELL YOU all about our lines of Shoes, Shirts, Suits and Sox without putting out a catalogue, and that costs money, and costs raise prices—so there you are. Come and see. You can't compare our values without seeing the goods anyway.

SOME ATTEMPTS AGAINST THE BANK OF ENGLAND

Will the Bank of England disappear? It is proposed to demolish it, and erect a more commodious and up to date building in its place.

Square, grim, terrible in its grey rock-like walls—a prison-like place, frowning and chilly, with no door to let life into or out of it, and with no windows at which one may catch a glimpse of a face or form in threat of its far-flung sides, stands "the Bank"—the money heart of Britain—from whence used to flow the steady stream of gold, replaced now by the magic, crisp, crinkly paper that is gold's worth—the money and notes that millions are striving and toiling for from rising sun till dusk.

PROVED IMPREGNABLE

The grim, stolid, blank walls are only broken on the front. There, through its pillared entrance, stream in and out people bringing and carrying away money through its jealously guarded doors. The Bank usually holds within it twenty million pounds' worth ($100,000,000) of gold and notes. It is the strongest treasure-house in the world. Ever since it was first built hungry eyes of the most expert and desperate bank breakers have scanned those grim walls in vain. Villainy has stealthily hovered around it, and ebbed and flowed about it, and given up hope of those millions. The rock has been impregnable.

A short distance away was another grim, grey stone building bearing many similar features—terrible, frowning. It was a prison—Newgate—and ever since the two sullen faced places were built the deep-set iron-flanged door of the prison has opened to swallow up the enemies of the other. Newgate has been the Bank's faithful friend.

If villainy has found the treasures of the Bank unapproachable, it has embarked on a thousand desperate cunning schemes against its treasure from outside. Its money could be imitated, its notes forged. So the most cunning brains have waged perpetual war against it. But the grim building has hands, and eyes, and ears, hidden and reaching throughout the world. Suddenly its hand has closed, and the door of Newgate has opened to swallow up and clang to upon another white-faced despairing comer to its dreadful shadow-haunted cells—a "Bank prisoner."

ROMANCE OR TRAGEDY

A young and beautiful girl whose ears waited for the chime of the marriage bells, and who was fated to hear in their place the dread execution bell of St. Sepulchre's knelling the death of her lover, is the figure which haunts one in connection with the first of the banknote forgers.

The daughter of a Lincoln's Inn solicitor, she had become engaged to a young fellow named Vaughan. Dashing, handsome Dick Vaughan had won her heart, and she, in turn, had at last wheedled her stern, law-dry old father to look with approval on him. He had heard stories of Vaughan's wild career at Oxford, but, anyway, the young fellow had taken his degree. He was twenty-six now, and seemed settled down to serious work, and to proving himself worthy of the girl he loved.

He was, he informed the old gentleman, making money. As a proof of his doing so, he showed his girl handfuls of notes, which, it was agreed, she should keep in a box only to be opened after their marriage.

When there were a thousand pounds ($5,000) in the box—a nice sum on which to start the home—the marriage should be celebrated. The day was only a week or two off now—the store of precious notes had grown and grown. Then suddenly stern-faced men swooped down upon the solicitor's residence and demanded to see the treasure. The notes were forgeries and Vaughan was carried away—to death—the punishment at that time of such an offence.

TRACKED TO THEIR DOOM

In the grey light of early dawn, one morning in 1872, a man watched at the corner of a well-to-do street in Edinburgh, ever keeping his eyes bent on the door of one house. At length the door opened a little, and a face peered out. Then a tall, good-looking, well-tailored young fellow sauntered down the steps, and, with the shadow following, strolled down the street to slip a letter he was carrying in his hand in a pillar-box. Suddenly he turned, his eyes met those of the shadow behind him, and, with a hoarse cry, he rushed away, with the other in fierce pursuit, ever growing closer and closer—ever bringing the terrible hand, eager to grip him and drag him to justice, nearer and nearer. His pursuer was on him at last. The captured man was George Bidwell, one of the famous band of bank forgers who, with his brother Austin and another, had come from the United States bent on reducing the Bank's treasury by a million of gold by means of forged bonds.

The plot had brought them in thousands, when a slip on the forgers' part had led to its detection, and the gang had fled to seek hiding where they might.

A week or two before that race in the Edinburgh streets a merry wedding-party had gathered in the great salon of the American Embassy in Paris. The bride was young and handsome—an English girl; and the bridegroom was a charming fellow almost as young as herself. He was wealthy, and after the ceremony the couple set off on their honeymoon to Spain. Thence they passed to the West Indies, and finally took up their abode in one of the beautiful white marble villas dotting the higher land around the gay little town of Havana. They were very happy, and entertained largely.

One evening, while a party of guests was there, the door of the dining-room flew open. Strangers were standing there, the first one revolver in hand. He was a detective, and he had come to arrest the host, the husband of the fainting dark-tressed girl with the dazzling diamonds in her hair. The host was Austin Bidwell. The hands of the Bank had stretched to that corner of the world and grasped him.

He and his brother both received sentence of penal servitude for life.

"THE ECCENTRIC LODGER"

Hardly breathing, creeping with the soft feet of cats up the linoleum-covered stair of the little house in Winsor Street, in a Birmingham suburb, three men made their way like shadows up and up, pausing now and again as their feet awakened some louder creak in the stairs. Coming at last to a little landing, they crept toward the door.

In that room was "the eccentric lodger"—the man who allowed no one ever to pass inside—"doing for himself," as the landlady said. As they crept closer the door was, to their amazement, suddenly flung open, and a man confronted them. What ears he must have had? They were on him in an instant, and hurled him backward while the handcuffs clicked upon his wrists.

He was a man named Griffiths, a forger of banknotes—and never had the grim, grey building a more dangerous prey on its hoards than "the eccentric lodger" in the quite, respectable Birmingham lodgings. "The game is up," Griffiths promised that if the detectives would take him for a drive the next day he would show them where part of his plant was buried. In a field at the back of the Birmingham Waterworks he waved his manacled hands to a bush.

"I guess I shall never want it again" he said.

He was right. The prison swallowed him till death stilled the hands for ever.

The hands of the Bank stretch everywhere to drag to punishment those who dare to assail its majesty. So terrible is its reputation for bringing offenders against it to crushing bitter repentance that the criminal's heart shrinks in dread from incurring its wrath. The number of offenders against it has steadily dwindled and dwindled. In one year—long back—it prosecuted no fewer than 142 offenders. Now years pass without any serious attempt being made upon it.

FATHER AND SON

The Barmash gang, dragged to the dock of the Old Bailey before Mr. Justice Darling some years back, was the last great band of forgers. Three men appeared in the dock, the centre figure being that of an old, cowering man, a helpless cripple, paralyzed, so that he had to be carried in and out of court in the arms of the warder. On one side of him stood his son—a young fellow whom the father had led into crime—and on the other an accomplice. Ten years for the son, fifteen years for the father, and twenty years for the accomplice—such were the terrible sentences!

The warders hustled forward and carried the paralyzed old man away, and, while the court was proceeding with other business, in the vaults below there suddenly rang out a shot, and alarmed warders, rushing to the cell of the old man, found he had committed suicide.

In some mysterious way he had possessed himself of the revolver, and he must have been hugging it to his bosom all the time he had been that day in court, nestling it to him in mockery of the sentence he should receive when he thought of that way of escape, or, perhaps, waiting, watching, watching, longing for a moment which did not come when he might gleam it forth and fire murderous shots at the man—an accomplice who had turned informer—who, in the witness-box, so glibly told the story which sent him to prison.

WE'VE GOT NOTHING ON EVE

When every pool in Eden was a mirror
That unto Eve her dainty charms
proclaimed,
She went undraped without a single
fear,
Or thought that she need be ashamed.

'Twas only when she'd eaten of the apple
That she became inclined to be a prude,
And found that evermore she had to grapple
With that much debated problem of the nude.

Thereafter she devoted her attention,
Her time and all her money to her clothes;

And that was the beginning of convention,
And of modesty as well, I suppose.

Reaction has set in in fashion recent,
Now girls conceal so little from the men,
It would seem in the name of all that's decent

Some one ought to pass the apples round again.

MAKING THE HEN PAY

The United Farmers of West Zorra, Oxford county, intend to stand no further nonsense from the class of hens known to the poultry world as "star boarders." A hen culling campaign throughout the whole township will begin, and the otiose birds that refuse to do a decent stint of work will have to go into the pot or the oven where they will serve a useful purpose. At any time it is a poor hen that will not pay for her own feed, and the present high cost of living for chickens has made it imperative that no mercy shall be shown the ones that will not give an adequate return for what they take in. It is a case of the survival of the fittest, directed by human intelligence instead of natural selection.—Toronto Globe.

A. E. Olmstead of Hastings, Mich., is here on a business trip in connection with his farm at Armada.

The Patterson Bros. residence at Armada burned down last week. Too much heat for the breakfast porridge spread to the walls of the building while the occupant was away rounding up his horses.

Stanley Trew, linotype operator on the staff of the Lethbridge Herald, spent the week with his parents at Badger Lake.

Miss Smith, formerly on the staff of the Milk River consolidated school, has been engaged to teach the First Chance school and commenced her duties last week.

Miss Walker, advance agent for the Dominion Chataqua, is in town in an endeavor to promote a three-day program for Lomond for some time next summer. If the required number of backers can be secured to sign the financial guarantee it's a go.

Jas. MacQueen has resigned from the position of postmaster at Lomond.

Ed. Lacquement's injured leg is progressing as favorably as could be expected.

Duke Armstrong unloaded a car load of Adams wagons this week and is making fast delivery of the lot.

W. H. Smith has negotiated a sale of Bob Plunkett's threshing outfit to a Mr. Mooney of Cochrane.

The Home Grain Co. shipped out this week the first car of rye ever billed from Lomond, the grain coming in from the Guess Ranch. And now a bunch of the dry birds are patiently awaiting its return in liquid state.

Duck hunters all took to the lakes some time in the night on Tuesday. We have heard all kinds of successful reports but have seen none of the ducks.

The cardinal point in farming at the present time is weed control. To kill the weed before the seed matures is all important. This work requires the use of efficient machinery. ## THE DRY CAMPAIGN

From information gathered at the headquarters of the Alberta Referendum Campaign Committee in Edmonton the campaign conducted by the prohibitionists is well under way. Under the committee's direction the office and field staff have been appointed and organization of district and local committees has been rigorously promoted. H. H. Hull, General Secretary of the Social League is Provincial Organizer and Business Manager of the campaign and Rev. Edward S. Bishop, till recently Child Welfare Secretary of the League and now a Field Secretary of the Department of Evangelism of the Methodist Church has been loaned by the church to the campaign and is serving as Office Secretary and editor of the Searchlight, which is the official organ of the campaign. Rev. A. C. Bryan, Presbyterian minister of Taber was appointed secretary of the provincial committee and is giving his full time to the campaign in the office in Edmonton.

For the more thorough organization of the various localities of the province a strong force of District Organizers has been appointed and given charge either of single provincial constituencies or groups of constituencies. At present some sixteen or seventeen organizers are at work and other appointments are contemplated in the near future. Local committees have already been organized in considerably over two hundred and fifty centres, large and small.

Reports received at the head office indicate opposition in a few sections of the province but this is in sections where a majority adverse to prohibition was recorded in the plebiscite of 1915. It is said to be very evident, however, that this opposition is much weaker than then, and there are points where it would not be surprising if the coming in of the women's vote should swing over to a prohibition majority. In many other sections prohibition sentiment is very strong, some indeed being overwhelmingly so. Prohibition workers are, however, taking no chances but pushing their organization and propaganda with all possible vigor. They are out not only to secure the necessary bare majority to stop importation of intoxicating liquor into the province for beverage purposes but to register such an emphatic pronouncement on the part of the whole body of citizens that the attitude of the public to the matter of law enforcement will leave no room for doubt.

The Thresher That Sends All The Grain Into The Bag

MILLIONS of dollars are wasted in threshing each year in the form of grain which is fed into the separator but never reaches the bag—grain that works through to the stacker and is blown out with the straw. This is a necessary evil with the old vibrator type of thresher—but not with the Aultman-Taylor New Century.

The Aultman-Taylor New Century Thresher, equipped with the Universal Rotary Straw Rack device and Inclined Open Web, stop this loss. They thresh and save all the grain.

Universal Rotary Rack

The Universal Rotary Rack positively gets all the grain out of the straw. Its rotary action gives it double the agitation of the vibrating rack, hence double separating capacity. It moves the straw rearward in a continuous thin stream, insuring perfect separation and greater capacity. And at the same time, it saves power and stops vibration.

Four Sizes--All Standard

Aultman-Taylor Threshers are made in four sizes, all absolutely standard in design and construction. The sole difference between the largest and smallest New Century Thresher is one of size only. Our two smaller threshers are the ideal size for individual use with the small tractor.

We will be glad to give you any further information along this line at any time. Come in and talk it over with us now.
